

DISASTER PREPAREDNESS AND MANAGEMENT

Introduction

Disasters are catastrophic and they occur when least expected. They occur as a result of natural, man-made, technical risks, or a variety of other variables that affect how exposed and vulnerable a population is. Only when the general population is enlightened about the causes of disasters and how to mitigate or prevent them, can they be avoided.

To protect against material, economic, human, and environmental damages, register and learn about disaster prediction, prevention, and mitigation.

Who should attend: Managers, Security Personnel, Workers Union Representatives, Health Safety & Environment Officers, Fire Officers, Enterprise Risk personnel.
